How Many Bodyguards Does It Take to Protect Lady Gaga?

Lady Gaga must know how much she's pissed off some of her fellow New Yorkers recently with her baseball game antics.

How else can you explain the rather large security detail around her last night in NYC...

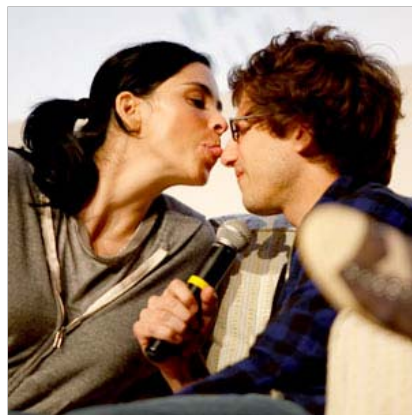

The "Alejandro" songstress hit Philippe Chow for dinner with a mystery man. After the two quietly entered through the downstairs bar, they were whisked upstairs to the private dining room, according to a source.

As for how many bodyguards were stationed outside the door for the two-hour meal, we're told there were—ready for this?—six!

Meanwhile, up north at the Nantucket Film

Festival, Sarah Silverman finally got to do what she has apparently wanted to do for a long time—lick Andy Samberg's nose! The Saturday Night Live funnyman allowed Silverman to taste his schnoz in front of a few hundred people while they were panelists on Ben Stiller's All-Star Comedy Roundtable.

In other, um, tasty news, one of our faves in Hollywood, Allison Janney, enjoyed a few Oxley gin cocktails this weekend at the Aspen Food & Wine Classic, where Top Chef winner Michael Voltaggio asked her to be his sous chef for the food fest's annual Quickfire challenge. She helped him prepare a lamb and tomatoes dish.
