New Fears for Scott: He's Having a Breakdown

Scott Disick displays strange behavior after a tragic loss

Scott Disick looked like he didn't have a care in the world. Strolling down the streets of New York City, happily chatting on his cellphone on Jan. 6, he beamed at the sight of photographers. Onlookers would have thought he was on the East Coast for a party or appearance — but sadly, he was there for his father's funeral.

Just two months after Scott lost his beloved mother, Bonnie, to cirrhosis of the liver, his father, Jeffrey, has also died. But Scott's not acting like a guy grieving for his parents. Instead, he's in serious denial — and has girlfriend Kourtney Kardashian worried that he's heading for a major breakdown.

AVOIDING THE TRUTH
Everyone copes in his own

low 10Oak reveler. "Scott seemed drunk."

GETTING HIM HELP
Scott, who ended his night at 1:30 a.m. with a Corona and a cigarette in hand, would rather drown his sorrows than talk about them. But that's dangerous.

That's what Kourt, 34, is concerned about. Since Jeffrey's death from unknown causes on Jan. 2, Scott, 30, has been posting rowdy Instagram photos and letting loose during nights out with pals. On Jan. 11 — two days after burying his father — he made the party rounds, hitting up rapper Lil Twist's 21st birthday at Philippe before heading to 10Oak with pals. "There were bottles of Grey Goose and other liquor at their table," recalls a fel-

PARTYING AWAY THE PAIN
Scott hasn't stopped living it up ever since his mom, Bonnie, died in early November. "He's a mess," says a friend, "and not acting like a dad should."

TRYING TO BUY HAPPINESS
In recent days, Scott's been showing off pics online of his Lamborghini Aventador — which costs roughly $400,000 — and a new $100,000 bracelet collection.

ACTING LIKE EVERYTHING'S GREAT

Just days after his dad's death, Scott posted — and then swiftly deleted — this photo of him spoofing Kim and Kanye's steamy "Bound 2" video with a friend.
