

Gotham Eats: Summer Dining Guide

By Regina Adams

This summer, make the most of the long balmy nights in the city that never sleeps and discover the best evening dining options in New York. From SoHo to the Upper East Side, these restaurants ensure an inviting atmosphere and delicious food to share with friends and family. Enjoy a delectable meal until as late as 2:00am at these New York hotspots, which also feature extensive cocktail menus and a wide selection of wines and beer.

Philippe Chow

Owner and Executive Chef Philippe Chow puts his own contemporary spin on traditional Beijing-style cuisine at Philippe on Manhattan's Upper East Side. This elegant Chinese restaurant serves an expertly designed menu of signature dishes such as Chicken Satay, Peking Duck, Green Prawns, and Nine Seasons Spicy Prawns—each presented family style—as well as a too-good-to-resist dessert menu from pastry chef Kostas Paterakis, that includes Red Velvet Cake; the gluten-free Warm, Bittersweet Chocolate Molten Cake; and Peanut Butter Mousse Pie. Specialty drinks ranging from a Lychee Martini to Midnight Mojito, are just the icing on this epicurean cake. In addition to its delectable cuisine, Philippe can meet the needs of high-profile diners looking for an intimate meal with friends without prying eyes. Guests may enjoy the restaurant's expansive space set over three floors with an interior which exudes an air of exoticness and opulence, with a signature color palette of black, white and red. Dinner is served until 11:30pm (Monday – Saturday) and Sunday until 11:00pm.
